Did you know that Facebook is one of the largest online dictionaries in the world? Now you can speak even faster and be a bit smarter when you chat or post on Facebook. Oxford Online Dictionary and."Thor has a really nice home." An unknown man then put on a shirt and pointed to it and said, "I like this shirt." "You like it?!" "I like it." "You like it? It's a $60 shirt. Why do you like it?" The man replied, "I just thought it was a really nice shirt." "Okay, that's it. You're fired." "Why are you firing me? I didn't say it was a bad shirt, I just thought it was a nice shirt." "You said you liked it. That means it's bad." "But it wasn't that bad, it was really nice. I just thought it was a nice shirt." "Okay, you can stay, but you can't talk about that shirt ever again. You can't even say it was good." "It was good." "If you say it was good, you're fired." "But it was good." "Look, I'm gonna fire you whether you say it was good or bad. You're fired." "Okay, I'll say it was good." "That's it. You're fired." "But it was good." "Now, go home and never talk about that shirt again." "Okay, I won't say it was good again." "If you do, you're fired." China's efforts to exploit regional cooperation to counter the United States, a cornerstone of President Barack Obama's "pivot to Asia," have shown signs of progress, with foreign ministries of many countries and organizations joining hands to articulate their concerns. This year, for instance, the nations of South Korea, Taiwan, Japan, India, Vietnam, and the Philippines joined forces to protest Japan's move to tighten its controls on a group of uninhabited East China Sea islets. Washington has long sought to maintain a balance in the disputed waters. In other examples, Singapore has joined Beijing's efforts to claim the South China Sea as its own and has protested Australia's successful bid for a casino in the South China Sea. An effort by foreign ministries of
